PART I - INSTRUCTIONS:

Next to this, you will find 18 statements. Each of these represents something to which a person can assign different values (good or bad).

Read all the statements carefully and if there are any you don't understand, ask for their meaning.

Write the number 1 in front of the statement that, in your opinion, represents the most good value. Indicate with the number 2 the statement you consider second, and so on.

Number all the statements using a different number for each one (1, 2, 3, 4,...) until you reach number 18, which will represent the value you consider the worst. Don't judge the statements by their importance, but exclusively by the goodness or badness they contain.

Concentrate on your task and decide quickly what number you're going to assign to each statement. There is no time limit, but most people number all the statements in about ten minutes.

Now you can begin. Remember to fill in your personal data and the date on which you are completing the test.

PART II - INSTRUCTIONS:

Next to this, you will find a column with 18 statements. Each one concerns something about which a person can assign different values depending on their own considerations.

Read all the statements carefully and if there are any you don't understand, ask for their meaning.

The expression "my work" refers to your current job or occupation. If you don't have a job, substitute the expression "my work" with "what I am doing."

Write the number 1 in front of the statement with which you most agree or, in other words, the one that represents what is most important to you at this moment in your life.

And so number all the statements until you reach the one with which you most disagree, the one that represents the least value for you (to which you will assign the number 18).

Concentrate on your task and decide quickly what number you're going to assign to each of the statements. There is no time limit, but most people can number all the statements in about ten minutes.

Now you can begin.

MAKE SURE YOU HAVE USED ALL NUMBERS - FROM 1 TO 18 - WITHOUT REPEATING ANY.
